

SEPT. 30 – OCT. 2, 2004 UNIVERSITY OF COLORADO BOULDER, CO USA

“The significant problems we face cannot be solved by the same level of thinking that created them.” – Albert Einstein

Looking into the magnitude of today’s problems, it’s easy to acknowledge the wisdom of Einstein’s statement. The bigger challenge is finding new and effective “levels of thinking.” This is the core mission of Sustainable Resources.

The world’s most diverse networking event . . .

From engineering to the arts, from medicine to spirituality, from academia to grass roots NGO’s in developing countries; bringing together the world’s foremost experts.

. . . facilitating partnerships and collaborations . . .

Creating gestalts and connections that strengthen and empower the work of local non-profits and international NGO’s, large and small businesses, religious and educational organizations, USA and world-wide governments.

. . . and finding practical hands-on solutions to world poverty.

Real-world progress toward accomplishing the UN’s Millennium goals of eradicating extreme poverty, achieving universal primary education, promoting gender equality, reducing child mortality, improving maternal health, combatting HIV/AIDS, malaria, and other diseases, ensuring environmental sustainability and developing a global partnership for development.
